

La ciudad que soy

(Paco Martínez Soria)

1970

“Madrid is missing a double roof, I mean, a double city. That city you can expand, well, expand it. But if I were an architect, I would think up a city on top of the other. It would be the best project of all time. A city on top of another one, one for the night and one for the day. A dark and poorly lit one below and a bright, open one above. I would obviously live in the top one, but I would then move to the other one.”
